Academic preparation and success are the primary factors considered for admission to the university. No single factor, attribute or characteristic will be used to determine admission. We will consider both academic and personal achievement through a comprehensive review. Non-academic qualifications can make a good applicant strong. However, they will not make an academically weak applicant admissible.

Home-schooled students must show evidence of strong academic preparation and success in high school coursework. In addition, home-schooled students must complete the 17 academic units of rigorous college preparatory coursework required by the University of Wisconsin System. Applicants must complete the requirements listed below:

- English: 4 units
- Math: 3 units (Algebra I and higher)
- Social Science: 3 units
- Natural Science: 3 units
- Electives: 4 units

ACT/SAT scores are required as part of the application review process.

The home school administrator (typically the parent) must provide a comprehensive transcript. The transcript would need to consist of all the courses taken and completed, as well as the grade received in each course. Course descriptions may be required as well. The school administrator must sign and date the transcript and they must also verify the date of graduation. Even though this comes from the parent, we will accept it as official. In addition, the transcripts must include an address to verify residence. We will require transcripts from any/all schools attended.

Students that participate in a home school program that is administered by a school or program, a transcript will be required from that agency.
